Egypt E-Alert

In an effort to secure peace in Darfur, President Hosni Mubarak hosts talks with the Sudanese government and rebel groups.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak recently held talks with the President of Sudan, Omar al-Bashir. The meeting is part of efforts by Egypt to encourage negotiations between the Sudanese government and rebel groups. Egyptian officials had previously met with leaders of six guerrilla groups.

Bahar Idriss Abu Garda, leader of the United Resistance Front, one of the rebel groups attending the talks, said Egypt would "play a very important" unifying role in the coming days.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ahmed Aboul Gheit said his country had a strategic interest in helping to secure peace in Darfur.

"There may be friendly countries or the United Nations or regional countries which have interests and try to achieve peace and stability in Darfur, and this is something we support and push for...but Egypt has shared borders with Sudan," he said.
